

Biography

Dennis Neu has spent fifty years dedicated to exploring and cultivating fine arts. Dennis studied art at the University of The Pacific and the University of California at Davis and has continued to broaden his skills with coursework, workshops and independent study throughout his career.

Neu's most outstanding contribution to the art community has been his incredible gift of teaching art creation to students of all ages. As a beloved art teacher for over 35 years, he has passed both his knowledge and passion of art on to generations of students attending Emerson Junior High School and local elementary schools. Dennis's professional goal has been to encourage others to pursue the creation of art as means for enrichment in their own lives. Retired, Dennis continues to bring this vital education to local classrooms in a part-time capacity, allowing him to pursue his own artistic enrichment.

An artist himself, Dennis has worked with diverse media including ceramics, oils and acrylic paint. This exhibit showcases Mr. Neu's exploration of line and color in natural forms using acrylics and graphite.
